THE DANGER OF COSMIC GENIUS.

Autori: Brower, Kenneth

Sursă: Atlantic Monthly \(10727825\); Dec2010, Vol. 306 Issue 5, p48-62, 10p, 3 Color Photographs

Tip de document: Article

Termeni subiect: *SCIENTISTS -- Attitudes
*GLOBAL warming
*RESEARCH
*GLOBAL warming -- Environmental aspects

Recenzii și produse: CHARLIE Rose \(TV program\)

Damenii: DYSON, Freeman

Extras: The article focuses on the perspectives of scientist Freeman Dyson on the earth's environment and climate change. The author discusses an interview with Dyson on the "Charlie Rose" television show in which Dyson denied the dangers of global warming and the negative influence of human life on the climate. He dismisses the notion that old age is a cause of Dyson's poor interpretation of facts and suggests that Dyson relies too much on the power of humans and science.

IN THE RANGE OF HIS GENIUS, Freeman Dyson is heir to Einstein -- a visionary who has reshaped thinking in fields from math to astrophysics to medicine, and who has conceived nuclear-propelled spaceships designed to transport human colonists to distant planets. And yet on the matter of global warming he is, as an outspoken skeptic, dead wrong: wrong on the facts, wrong on the science. How could someone as smart as Dyson be so dumb about the environment? The answer lies in his almost religious faith in the power of man and science to bring nature to heel.

ONE STARRY NIGHT 35 years ago, I drove the physicist Freeman Dyson through the British Columbia rain forest toward a reunion with his estranged son, George. The son, then 22, was a long-haired, sun-darkened, barefoot dropout with an uncanny resemblance to Thoreau. He had emigrated to Canada during the Vietnam War, and he lived 95 feet up a Douglas fir outside Vancouver. His passion was the aboriginal North American skin boat. In a workshop near his tree house, he had resurrected the baidarka, the kayak of the Aleutian Islands -- a watertight second skin, lightweight and nimble, in which the Aleut hunter originally, and young George himself eventually, became a kind of sea centaur, half man and half canoe. The father, Freeman, was then and continues to be a professor of physics at the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, New Jersey, employed there, as Einstein was before him, to think about whatever he finds interesting.

Freeman Dyson is one of those force-of-nature intellects whose brilliance can be fully grasped by only a tiny subset of humanity, that handful of thinkers capable of following his equations. His principal contribution has been to the theory of
